Serial robbers nabbed

ANDOVER. A man and a woman were arraigned yesterday on charges that they worked as serial bank robbers and stole cash from various banks in Eastern Massachusetts.

Ten local police departments from Melrose to Braintree and state police and the FBI worked to arrest the duo, officials said.

Christopher Decareau, 26, of Peabody was arrested Monday near an Andover bank. His alleged accomplice, Jenifer Sannizzaro, 24, of Gloucester, was arrested nearby.

The pair were under surveillance for some time before their arrest. METRO

Popular TV pastor nearly sells out arena ● Experts say success in Boston surprising, but it doesn't move Boston's religious scene ahead

The Texas pastor of the largest megachurch in the country is coming to Boston for a nearly sold-out event this weekend.

Pastor Joel Osteen, whose church attracts nearly 40,000 weekly attendees and even more through worldwide broadcasts, will host "A Night of Hope" at Boston University's Agganis Arena.

But Osteen's success in a city that has a progressive image doesn't necessarily mean the Bay State is more Christian than its reputation lets on.

"It's amazing if it's that successful," said Thomas Groome, a professor of theology and religious education at Boston College. He said that following is more deep-rooted in the Southeast than in Boston.

However, Groome also said Osteen's success here doesn't indicate a shift in Boston's religious outlook.

"It doesn't mean it pushes Boston more along on the seismic scale of religion," he said. "It shows that the interest in spiritualism is part of human nature … everybody has some kind of spiritualism because that's how humans are constructed."

"We are very excited to be back in this great city."
OSTEEN

Rodney Petersen, the executive director of Boston Theological Institute, said Osteen's popularity across the country helps his success here, along with the city's history.

"Boston is not just the origin of much of progressive religion, but Boston is also the birthplace of the evangelical movement," he said.

Osteen's last visit to Boston was in 2007.

"We connect with thousands of people in the Boston area through our television broadcast, e-mails, podcast and our social networks and many in the Boston area have asked us to visit," Osteen said through a spokeswoman.

Road rage hits T bus drivers

Dueling bus drivers take to roadway Police charge them both with dangerous driving On leave with pay

A pair of MBTA bus drivers are on leave after an apparent road rage incident between them this week in Chelsea.

It started about 6 p.m. Tuesday when the driver of the Route 111 bus, Hazel Cannon, pulled behind a Route 116 bus driven by Kokou Agnonon.

Cannon, a two-year veteran, apparently became upset that Agnonon, who has been on the job for six months, let passengers off of the bus too slowly, according to WFXT.

The drivers pulled alongside one another and began to argue. The incident was captured on surveillance camera and showed the buses moving through a narrow roadway and nearly hitting a Chelsea police cruiser parked nearby.

▶ T GM Rich Davey

Police cited the two drivers.

"The [general manager] is very concerned about the reported behavior and he has ordered a full investigation," the T said in a statement.

T General Manger Rich Davey told the director of bus operations to quickly complete an investigation so he can decide whether to discontinue the drivers' pay.

Currently they are on leave with pay.

Both drivers received citations for driving to endanger.

With temperatures on the rise, shootings up

Police have kept violent shootings down all year, but summertime violence may be catching up ◆ Peace loses ground over holiday weekend

As the temperatures climbed this week so too did the city's homicide count.

Two men were found shot to death Sunday just minutes apart and another man was shot Tuesday night in Dorchester.

In addition, the number of nonfatal shootings spiked, leaving eight people injured between Friday and Wednesday morning.

Police have been able to keep the number of homicides and shootings well below last year's pace, but the recent spate has erased some of that ground.

Traditionally, violence has peaked during the summer months, but police said they will continue with the department's high-visibility and walking patrols.

"It is not unusual to experience periods of increase and decrease as it pertains to violent crime which tends to be cyclical," said Elaine Driscoll, a police spokeswoman, who added that 64 police recruits will graduate from the training academy this month.

Driscoll also said that the most recent homicides involved victims who were all known to police.

The most recent murder occurred just after 8 p.m. when officers found a 28-year-old man with a gunshot wound. He was pronounced dead at Boston Medical Center.

The first fatal shooting Sunday occurred about 9:40 p.m. outside 29 Selden St. in Dorchester. Raheem Browder, 20, of Boston, was killed.

Police responded to another shooting about 30 minutes later in Mattapan. Marc Edmond, 22, of Mattapan, was shot multiple times and killed.

No arrests were made as of press time.

While homicides recently increased, this year's total of 13 is still below the 27 total at this time last year.

- Nonfatal shootings have spiked. Fourteen shootings occurred between May 22-30, according to BPD statistics. Nine shootings occurred in the two weeks prior.
- There have been 70 nonfatal shootings this year compared to 79 at this time last year.

'Soft patch' redux: Economy stagnant

Is the recession here to stay? Jobs data indicate a protracted period of slow growth Fewer hires, slowed output Stocks take a tumble, too

U.S. companies hired far fewer workers than expected in May and output in the manufacturing sector slowed to its lowest level since 2009, adding to concerns that the U.S. recovery is running out of steam.

Economists slashed their forecasts for Friday's payrolls report, considered the best barometer of the world's biggest economy, after private-sector job growth tumbled to just 38,000, its lowest level in eight months.

Yesterday's reports were the latest signals that economic growth remained sluggish in the second quarter after hitting a weak spot in the first months of the year.

Factory growth around the world weakened last month, surveys from Europe to Asia showed, raising concerns that important export markets for U.S. companies are drying up.

The worse-than-expected U.S. slowdown could prompt the Federal Reserve to stick with its super-easy monetary policies for longer than previously thought. REUTERS

US automakers showing signs of a downturn

DETROIT. Major automakers are on track to report far weaker May U.S. auto sales than expected as higher vehicle prices prompt consumers to put off purchases in the face of a weakening economy.

The tightening supply of vehicles, especially small cars, after the Japan earthquake emboldened many companies to raise car and truck prices, a strategy that analysts and investors said had backfired.

"They may have jumped on the price increases a little early when the consumer is not quite ready," said Gary Bradshaw, a portfolio manager with Hodges Capital Management.

GM U.S. sales chief Don Johnson said the industry-wide sales rate would probably be below 13 million for "the next couple of months," but both GM and Ford stood by their 2011 forecasts for sales of between 13 million and 13.5 million vehicles. REUTERS

Hey, bullies: It's time to give it a rest

Kids with aggressive behavior may suffer from sleep deprivation Research stressed need for quality zzzs

Children with behavioral problems including bullying and other aggressive behaviors are likely to suffer from poor sleep, according to a new study from the University of Michigan Medical School.

Researchers observed a group of students with behavioral problems at an elementary school in Ypsilanti, Mich. These children, researchers found, were twice as likely as normal children to have trouble sleeping at night. They were also sleepy during the day.

"Good sleep practices for children are just as important as a healthy diet and exercise," says Dr. Louise O'Brien, an assistant professor in University of Michigan's Sleep Disorders Center. "What this study does is draw attentions that poor sleep for children can indeed drive to bullying or other aggressive behaviors."

It is recommended that children in preschool sleep between 11-13 hours a night, and school-aged children between 10-11 hours of sleep a night.

The study showed that sleepiness during the day seemed to be caused by breathing problems during the night. These range from habitual snoring to obstructive sleep apnea, where the airway collapses at night.

Chaotic home environments, researchers warn, may lead to fragmented sleep because of too much electronic stimulus.

O'Brien said that the impairment in the prefrontal cortex of the brain caused by sleep deprivation may lead to aggression or disruptive behavior among children. She believed that the study would help to "eliminate a significant proportion of bullying in children."

E. coli outbreak grows in Europe — 16 deaths

Nations point the finger as vegetable contamination sickens 1,500 Spanish cucumbers weren't culprit

German health officials said yesterday there had been a dramatic increase in the number of people infected in an E.coli outbreak that has so far killed 16 and whose source is still unknown. The outbreak has made more than 1,500 people ill in eight European countries, and has led to an international row over the source of the contamination.

The German disease control agency reported 365 new E.coli cases yesterday, a quarter of them involving a life-threatening complication of a type of E. coli known as Shiga toxin-producing E. coli.

European Union officials said three cases had also been reported in the United States, adding that most infections reported outside Germany involved German nationals or people who had recently traveled to the country.

German authorities initially identified cucumbers imported from Spain as the likely source of the outbreak. But on Tuesday they admitted that further tests on the cucumbers showed that they did not carry the dangerous bacteria strain responsible for the deaths. REUTERS

The pain in Spain

Spain said it was considering legal action against German regional authorities for blaming its produce for the E. coli outbreak.

- Spanish farmers say lost sales are costing them 200 million euros a week and the crisis could put 70,000 out of work in a country which already has the highest unemployment rate in the European Union.
- "There has never been a case of this nature in Spain, which means the bacteria is not in Spain," Deputy Prime Minister Alfredo Perez Rubalcaba told Cadena Ser, Spain's most listened-to radio station. REUTERS

Quoted

"To have such a high number of severe cases means that probably there was a huge contamination at some junction. That could have been anywhere from the farm to the fork ... anywhere along [the] food chain."

Lively, in the buff?

Things are really on fire for Blake Lively. Not only is the "Gossip Girl" actress appearing in the sure-to-be blockbuster "Green Lantern" this summer, but she's also allegedly dating Leonardo DiCaprio and, most importantly for us gossip-hounds, she's currently trying to quash her first nude photo scandal. Tear! She's so grown up! But her rep insists pictures that recently leaked online are not of Lively's lil' van der Woodsen. "The photos of Blake Lively, which have just surfaced on various websites including Perez Hilton and Zap2it.com, are 100 percent FAKE," her rep says in a statement. "Blake has never taken nude photos of herself. Blake will pursue legal action against the publication which initially published these photographs and any other outlets that republish them."

Blake Lively

While we're not going to do so (no lawsuits for me — a girl has to protect her cubic zirconia somehow), I will say they look an awful lot like Lively. Just with no clothes on. And really, what's the difference between naked and the no-pants she usually has on?

Jessica who?

A mostly unknown theater actress joins Brad Pitt in Terrence Malick's latest epic film, 'The Tree of Life'

Jessica Chastain, 30 years old and basically unknown, stars in Terrence Malick's "The Tree of Life" with superstar Brad Pitt — playing his wife, a role she never thought she'd get. We met in Cannes, a few hours after the screening of the film.

How did you get cast in "The Tree of Life"? By Terrence Malick in person?

The first audition I had, he wasn't there. It was with the casting director and producer Nick Gonda. They didn't necessarily want me to do a scene. It was more about behavior, seeing someone acting, moving, talking — just being like in a Terrence Malick movie. For instance, they asked me to put a baby sleep, sing him a lullaby. Look at someone with love and respect. And also a little bit of dialogue from a Eugene O'Neill play, just to hear my voice. A couple of days later, I was asked If I wanted to meet with Terry.

How did it go, that first meeting?

He asked me a lot questions about myself. We did a lot of reading, an entire day. After that, I remember saying to my friends, "Even if we don't end up working together on this film, I will forever be grateful for the time we shared together." Later I had a few other auditions, and it was tough because a lot of famous actresses were interested in the part.

How much did the experience of working with Malick affect your life ?

He will forever but one of the greatest teachers I'll ever know. He took a big risk in casting me. He changed my life — as an actress, but also as a person. Terrence Malick is the kind of person who is constantly asking questions like, "Why are we here? What kind of human being do we choose to be?" I think about that every day. This movie really opened my heart.

Q&A

How was it working with Brad Pitt?

"I'm kind of shy, a little awkward, but when Terry called to tell me Brad was going to be in the film with me, I had a hard time staying calm. I was with my friends and I took a piece of paper to write, 'BRAD PITT !!!' When he showed up for rehearsal, he arrived all by himself on his motorcycle. Like a normal guy! All my anxiety went away in a minute because he made me feel so comfortable."

WARNER BROS/ADULT SWIM

▶ Rob Corddry stars as Dr. Blake Downs in "Childrens Hospital."

'Childrens Hospital'

COMEDY. If the ridiculous medical cases — including a boy stuck in a trough of quicksand — don't make you giggle, perhaps Jon Hamm's cameo as the mysterious Derrick Childrens will in the third season premiere of this silly, smart hospital drama parody from creator/star Rob Corddry. Season premiere, Midnight, Adult Swim

'Love Bites'

COMEDY. A rotating cast of characters (Becki Newton and Greg Grunberg are among the regulars) struggles with love, sex and dating in this new comedic anthology series. Series premiere, 10 p.m., NBC

10 Great reasons to cool off in a theater near you this weekend

2 'The Hangover Part II' The men of "the wolf pack" are back for another evening of unintentional debauchery, this time in Bangkok.

3 'Kung Fu Panda 2' Martial arts-performing animals once again join forces against an even more insidious enemy. The voices of Jack Black and Angelina Jolie return.

4 'Tree of Life' Terrence Malick's epic story of the creation of Earth interwoven with the story of a young boy growing up in 1950s Texas earned him the Palm d'Or at Cannes this year. For arty types, this is a must-see trip-out experience.

5 'Pirates of the Caribbean: On Stranger Tides' This Disney franchise's fourth installment is such a big deal, no other studios dared to put out a major release on the same weekend it came out. This time around, Captain Jack Sparrow (Johnny Depp) pairs up with Angelica (Penelope Cruz) for another swashbuckling adventure.

6 'Midnight in Paris' Woody Allen's latest movie is easily one of his best in years, with Owen Wilson starring as a tourist in Paris, who gets swept away to 1920s France each night to socialize with F. Scott Fitzgerald, Picasso and Hemingway.

7 'Bridesmaids' As every woman knows, a good friend's wedding means drama, eccentric and annoying long-lost friends and overimbibing. Expect all that, but funnier from "SNL" ladies Kristen Wiig and Maya Rudolph.

8 'Priest' The last time we saw Paul Bettany, he was opening his mouth freaky-wide for that apocalyptic film, "Legion." Now he's in post-apocalypse mode as a priest out to avenge his niece in a world besieged with vampires.

9 'Hesher' Unlikely subject enters the lives of a broken family, throws it into chaos, and maybe helps them transform into the ideal family they never knew they could be. This time, the subject is a metalhead, played by Joseph Gordon-Levitt.

10 'Everything Must Go' Will Ferrell plays a hapless alcoholic whose wife locks him out of the house, with all of his possessions thrown on the front yard. Opportunities for funny? Plenty. But this film brings the drama, too. METRO

The beer-and-cocktail list is a step up from the usual, mediocre fare offered elsewhere nearby. Semanski says the beer menu — with options like Kona Longboard Lager from Hawaii and Widmer Brothers Drifter Pale Ale from Oregon — has been a strength so far. She calls their cocktail list "accessible, but adapted to a more sophisticated palate." The means champagne cocktails like The Abacus, made with Cold River Gin, lemon juice and cranberries marinated in sugar and Grand Marnier.

Transforming a department store into a bar takes smarts
The folks at new Downtown Crossing bar divided up the huge space to make for many little ones 'We wanted to break it up so people could feel their own intimacy,' says manager

ERIK BALDASSARI/METRO

The approach of true Scholars

It's incumbent upon ambitious new bars and restaurants to be versatile. The recently opened Scholars American Bistro and Cocktail Lounge in Downtown Crossing — part bistro, part lounge, part pool hall — succeeds on that front.

The owners of the nearby 6B Lounge have turned the old two-story Talbot's retail space into a multi-purpose entertainment destination. Up front, bistro-style seating flows into a long, 24-seat, acrylic bar serving up craft and classic cocktails and a well-selected beer list. Throughout the long space, intimate dining areas and living-room-style lounges peek out from the corners. Upstairs, there's an alabaster, back-lit bar and a handsome billiards room.

"Instead of people coming and seeing this cavernous space, we wanted to break it up so people could feel their own intimacy while still being able to interact with the other areas of the bar," general manager Kati Semanski explains.

Seems like it's working so far. Though attracting big enough crowds to fill a space like this in Downtown Crossing late at night hasn't always been easy.

"We're definitely working on making it a nighttime destination," says Semanski. A number of other new openings nearby should help in that regard as well. "The more bars and restaurants and stores that are able to open in the area, the better for everyone."

Keeping the kitchen open every night, where they're serving up on-trend proteins like rabbit fritters and braised beef tongue sliders, is part of attracting that late-night crowd.

"We want people to come here for last call and to make it a destination for the neighborhood," says Semanski.

The Baseball Project is a supergroup that includes members of R.E.M. and the Dream Syndicate ◗ They are coming to your town to rock (and to watch the ball game)

Full COUNT

▶ The Baseball Project are, from left: Peter Buck, Scott McCaughey, Linda Pitmon and Steve Wynn. On Saturday they play the Foundation Room at the House of Blues (15 Lansdowne St., Boston). For more info visit www.livenation.com or call 800-745-3000.

MICHAEL E. ANDERSON

When Steve Wynn and Scott McCaughey named their supergroup The Baseball Project, they knew exactly what they wanted out of it.

"I think our goal at the beginning, rather than selling a gazillion records or having a million fans, was just to get free baseball tickets whenever we wanted," laughs Wynn.

With the tour for their sophomore effort, "Volume Two: High and Inside," the band — which also includes R.E.M.'s Peter Buck on guitar and Linda Pitmon on drums — has been living the impossible dream. We caught up with Wynn on the phone on Tuesday while he was stuck in traffic in Chicago.

"We're all baseball fans, primarily. There won't be a Lacrosse Project or a Curling Project."
STEVE WYNN

TO RECEIVE NEWS ON UPCOMING SHOWS, TEXT "HOT TICKETS" TO 89800

You've been incorporating a lot of real baseball experiences into your tour itinerary.
I threw out the first pitch at Wrigley Field yesterday, and we've seen like eight games in 10 days. We're just kind of combining a rock 'n' roll tour with baseball fantasy camp. … The funny thing is, even when we're not seeing games for Baseball Project-related stuff, we still go see other ball games. Today is a day off. It's the first day off in a while, and we're on our way to Toronto, and we saw that the road takes us through Detroit. We've got a night off, and the Tigers are hosting the Twins, and we figured, "Why not see a ball game?"

So you're enjoying America's favorite pastime during the day. Do you also enjoy the favorite pastime that goes along with that and put away a lot beers while you're there?
We're professionals [laughs].

What does that mean? That you are able to have a few cold ones at the park before you play, or do you abstain?
Let's just stick with, "We're professionals."

Was the subject of all your songs and the focus of the band always going to be baseball, rather than any other sport?
Oh yeah. No question about that. We're all baseball fans, primarily. There won't be a Lacrosse Project or a Curling Project.

When I first got wind of this, I was surprised because I never would have expected that you, the former singer of the Dream Syndicate, would do something so closely tied to sports. Do any of your fans express any similar surprise?
I think the biggest cases of people shaking their heads in confusion are fans over in Europe, where they just have no idea. They've been picking up the record and it's kind of like we're speaking Martian to them — but they really dig it.

Q&A: Sox vs. Yanks

Are there any sports rivalries within the band? Please tell me there's a Sox fan and a Yankees fan.
Well, I could plead the fifth on that one, but I'm a very big Yankees fan. But nonetheless, I've written more songs about the Red Sox than probably any other team. They're really our favorite subject, and the new album has several of them. There's "Buckner's Bolero," which of course has to do with the '86 World Series. And "Tony (Boston's Chosen Son)" is about Tony Conigliaro, and "Twilight of My Career" is about the wonderful decision by the Red Sox to let Roger Clemens go when he was 34. And we had "Ted F—ing Williams" on the first record, so we're kind of working our way towards a Red Sox tribute record.

Are you going to be at the Sox game on Saturday?
We are, in fact. That's actually for a few reasons. The main reason is that our sometimes-guest-keyboard-player is Josh Kantor, who is the organist at Fenway Park. He's our pal and he played with us down in Austin, at SXSW. And we're going to go see him play at Fenway — and if the game gets out early enough, he'll hopefully get over to our gig.

Luckily that's right across the street …
Yeah, the travel time will be pretty easy.

The Bible's notorious love poem — in which passionate, physical love between two people is used as a metaphor for transcendent mystical bliss — inspired this musical about a girl falling in love for the first time. The score that Liars and Believers chose, influenced by Leonard Cohen, the Decemberists, Elliott Smith and Neutral Milk Hotel, will be catnip for indie folk-rock fans.

Some men have lady parts

RE: "JOLIE JUST CAN'T STOP GUSHING": Reading "The Word," I wanted to comment on the bit about Angelina Jolie and Brad Pitt. I think Angelina was trying to say Brad is well-endowed. Some men, like me, have uteruses. We're transgender men, but are no less "real men." (Some transmen have their uteruses removed, but health insurance rarely covers sex-reassignment surgeries). Sex and gender are different; Jolie got them confused first, but your comment continued it. REED MILLER, VIA E-MAIL

Palin 2012 — end of days

McCain says Palin can beat Obama in 2012. Using the same rationale, the AFLAC duck could beat Palin in any given year! Bottom line: The GOP must face the reality that any ticket with Sarah Palin's name on it is a sure recipe for defeat. HERB STARK, VIA E-MAIL

Sarah Palin has about the same chance of being president of the United States as Fox News has of being considered a fair and balanced news network. Palin may know how to draw a crowd, but I believe it's primarily more of a morbid curiosity from the public. Watching a grizzly bear ride a unicycle wearing a Phillies cap will also draw huge crowds — but does that make the bear presidential material? ANTHONY P. JOHNSON, VIA E-MAIL

Less cruel prison ideas

RE: "FLOGGING VERSES PRISON: THE DEBATE": Why the brutality? How about getting felons to pick up trash on the highways and countryside, cleaning up urban wasteland and planting trees? Not only will it give them some societal perspective and sense of accomplishment, it will clean up America and reduce the proposed brutality of the physical-pain alternative. We can use those electronic-fence gadgets to stop them escaping! BRIAN BECK, VIA E-MAIL

World Court a world away

With the abdication of their Constitutional duty to defend people against torture and unlawful detainment, the Supreme Court leaves sick and dying justice to the arbitration of the World Court. I'm so ashamed to be an American at this point. How does a person plea for justice intervention by the World Court? Sign me up. Hitler would be proud. CHARLES COUCH, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Use your wit and humor not only to get your points across, but also to make it easier for others to remember what you're telling them.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. You're better off spending your day with companions who don't take themselves too seriously. It's these blithe spirits who can arouse your zest for life, something you can use right now.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. How easily an objective of significance can be achieved is dependent upon how well you adjust to circumstances that are likely to alter your tactics and challenge your alacrity.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. It's an excellent day to share knowledge with people in the know. You can be enlightened by information they have, and in exchange they can learn from you. Both will feel gratified.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Look for ways and means to grow financially through other than your usual sources. You might discover something that could be quite profitable.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. It isn't generally a good idea to let others do your thinking for you, but you might experience an exception from a suggestion made by another.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Conditions are ripe for staging a meeting of the minds with one who usually disagrees with you. Now is the day to approach that person on something for which you need help.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Put aside your outside interests for the moment and spend your spare time with your family. It could prove to be a real rewarding moment.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. This is an excellent day to make those much-needed contacts that will help you take care of your commitments. You shouldn't have any trouble reaching the right people in order to handle important matters.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. No one needs to tell you to be prudent in the management of your funds; that's something most bulls do automatically. Keep a closer eye on your spending. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Hot hair rescue!

- Summer is officially here, to the horror of your overworked tresses
- Hydrating treatments to protect your hair from summer sun damage

1. Marine Clean Detox Shampoo, $24, www.fekkai.com
The sea may strip away hair's nutrients, but the right marine ingredients can also aid its recovery. Fekkai's marine botanicals actively detox and replenish locks with a UV shield to prevent future fading.

2. Burt's Bees Color Keeper Green Tea & Fennel Seed Shampoo, $8, www.burtsbees.com
It's a win-win situation for you and the environment with this eco-friendly, antioxidant-packed, sulfate-free shampoo.

3. Kerastase Soleil Huile Celeste, $37, www.kerastase.com
The macadamia-infused oil is designed to protect against harmful UV rays. A word of advice: Don't get too trigger-happy with this oil-based spray; it can leave hair limp and greasy.

4. Aveda Sun Care Hair and Body Cleanser, $21, www.aveda.com
Feeling fruity? You will after drenching yourself in the fragrant scents of neroli and ylang-ylang. This treatment also has Morikue protein, which restores vitality to sun-, sea- and chlorine-damaged hair.

5. Bumble and bumble Creme de Coco Shampoo, $22, www.bumbleandbumble.com
Creme de Coco makes for an exotic shower experience thanks to its rich coconut fragrance and the moisturizing qualities of Murumuru butter.

6. Davines Moisturizing Replenishing shampoo, $21, www.davines.com
We apply after-sun lotion to our skin, so why aren't we rehydrating our exposed hair? Davines' formula of fatty acids, olive oil and almond effectively removes chlorine residue and revives weakened hair.

Underdog, favorite; Julien doesn't care

By almost all accounts, the Bruins went into last night's Game 1 of the Stanley Cup finals as underdogs.

That didn't seem to bother B's coach Claude Julien one bit.

"All I know is that we're here in the Stanley Cup finals because we deserve it," Julien said in his pregame press briefing. "We've gone through a lot to get to this stage, and because of that we've got a lot of resiliency in our game and a lot of determination. So it doesn't matter.

"At this stage, somebody's got to be a favorite, somebody's got to be an underdog. Some people really thrive on being underdogs, and some people would prefer to be underdogs. For us it doesn't really matter. We're not playing that card right now. We're just playing the card that we're here and we're here to win."

Vancouver went into the series opener as a 2-1 favorite to win the Cup. The Bruins nearly pulled the Game 1 upset, but fell 1-0 on a late goal. METRO

Late goal gives Game 1 to Canucks

Torres beats Thomas in the final minute to lift Vancouver ● Vezina Trophy finalists put on a goaltending exhibition ● Game 2 is Saturday

Tim Thomas stopped the first 33 shots the Vancouver Canucks threw at him last night.

The last — the 34th — cost him and the Bruins Game 1 of the Stanley Cup finals.

Raffi Torres scored an off-balance goal from Jannik Hansen and Ryan Kesler 19:41 into the third period, giving the Canucks a 1-0 win and a 1-0 lead in the series.

Thomas and Roberto Luongo were matched in a goalie duel for the ages. In the end, it was Luongo who posted his third shutout of the postseason.

The action came hot and heavy early, with the teams combining for 29 shots in the first period. The Canucks, especially, threatened, putting a quality chance on Thomas in the game's first 20 seconds.

But both defenses held their ground through the barrages and the power plays — six for each team, including a number of 5-on-3 and 4-on-3 situations.

The game seemed destined for overtime until Hansen hit a breaking Torres with a beautiful feed in the final minute. All Torres had to do was tap the puck past Thomas. METRO

Canucks getting mouthy

Game 1 of the Stanley Cup finals was chippy throughout, with penalties and scraps to spare.

But things got a bit out of hand — pun! — late in the first period, when Canucks winger Alex Burrows appeared to bite Patrice Bergeron's gloved hand during a tussle along the boards.

"He bit me," Bergeron said, according to the team's official Twitter feed, @NHLBruins. "That's not OK."

Burrows could face a suspension if it is confirmed he intentionally chomped down on Bergeron's hand. METRO

▶ The Canucks drafted Cam Neely ninth overall in 1983. He was traded to Boston 25 years ago.

Coming full circle for Neely

- Team president leads the B's against the club that drafted him
- Trade to Boston was 25 years ago

For Cam Neely, life is coming full circle so fast, he might need to make a line change.

Of all the times and all the places for Neely to lead the Bruins into the Stanley Cup finals as team president, one could hardly have picked a more ironic scenario.

Neely was born in British Columbia and spent his first three seasons as an NHL player for Vancouver before being traded to Boston.

Those facts are about to converge for a triple overtime of "This is Your Life." Monday is not only Neely's 46th birthday, but the 25th anniversary of his trade from the Canucks to the Bruins. And the Hall of Fame forward will celebrate both at the Garden, watching his Bruins play his former Canucks in Game 3 of the Stanley Cup finals.

"That'll be an exciting day, that's for sure," Neely said Tuesday. "Obviously to be in the finals is pretty special to begin with. You know, unfortunately, it didn't work out for me [in Vancouver] and things worked out really well in Boston."

Neely was part of two Cup finals teams with the Bruins as a player (1988, 1990) before another anniversary — 10 years last month since the career-killing hit delivered by Ulf Samuelsson — sent him on his path to the front office. Now, as the one-year anniversary of his becoming team president looms two weeks away, he can only watch as his players try to bring Boston its first Cup since 1972.

"It's much harder watching than playing, yes," Neely said. "I'm still getting used to it."

Nowitzki's finger feeling OK

Dirk Nowitzki might not have to wear a splint for the rest of the NBA Finals, after all.

The Dallas star tore a tendon in his non-shooting hand during the Mavericks' Game 1 loss Tuesday night. He said at the time he expected it to be splinted for the series.

But the finger wasn't as sore as he expected yesterday. "I'm really not worried. It's not that sore, so it should be OK," he said.

27 Nowitzki scored a team-high 27 points for Dallas on Tuesday. He shot 12-for-12 from the line, but 7-for-18 from the field.

Shaq walking away after 19 NBA seasons

Center's brief tenure with the Celtics ends after one season • Retiring due to persistent Achilles injury • Announces decision via social media

The Big Shamrock is making Boston his last stop.

After 19 NBA seasons — and a slew of nicknames — Shaquille O'Neal announced his retirement yesterday via the new social media tool Tout, a real-time video messaging service. The 39-year-old cited a persistent Achilles injury for walking away.

"We did it. Nineteen years baby," O'Neal said in the message. "I want to thank you very much. That's why I'm telling you first. I'm about to retire. Love you. Talk to you soon."

O'Neal, who signed a two-year contract with the Celtics last summer, played in only two of the final 35 regular-season games. He chose to retire now so Boston would have sufficient time to make off-season moves.

The future Hall of Famer retires with four titles, three Finals MVP trophies, one MVP and 15 All-Star appearances. METRO

Here's the bright spot: The White Sox aren't coming back to Fenway Park anytime soon.

Other than that, it's pretty glum for Red Sox fans these days.

Paul Konerko went 3-for-4 and Boston couldn't touch Chicago's relievers in a 7-4 loss yesterday at Fenway Park. The White Sox's win completed a three-game sweep; it was their seventh straight victory in Boston.

"Playing three games here is not the same as playing in a lot of stadiums," said Konerko, who put Chicago ahead with a seventh-inning single and homered in the ninth. "There's an energy you get that you don't get other places. So that is a help if you use it right."

Boston scored three runs off Chicago starter Gavin Floyd in the second inning, but couldn't get the lead to hold up. The White Sox plated runs in the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh innings, then sealed it with Konerko's drive off Jonathan Papelbon in the ninth.

Boston (30-26) has today off. ● METRO
